

MENU

Home / Column / Urgent 2030 agenda for Latin America and The Caribbean

Urgent 2030 agenda for Latin America and The Caribbean

Article by Barbados Today

Published on July 10, 2019

Guest Column

by Alicia Bárcena

The countries of Latin America and the Caribbean have undertaken a huge commitment to the 2030 Agenda with important advances in the implementation of its 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Nevertheless, trends reveal that compliance with this global roadmap to 2030 is at a critical point in the region.

Nearly four years after its approval, 29 of the 33 countries of Latin America and the Caribbean now have institutional mechanisms for the coordination and monitoring of the 2030 Agenda at the national level, grounded in legal instruments that define the scope and objectives of this work.

In contrast, the diversity in scope of some of the SDGs has put the integrity of the 2030 Agenda at risk. Thus, while some goals have been reached at the regional level, others would only be attainable with high levels of growth or strong distributive changes, and others appear unattainable under any circumstances.

Trending Stories

'Disrespectful'

1

Wanted: Persons of interest in ATM
skimming

2

Family
shattered

3

Two set for High Court trial

4

Murder accused remanded

5

'Slack
parents breeding criminals'
- MP

6

Among noteworthy advances achieved in the region, we can highlight the reduction in the mortality rate for children under five to less than 25 per 1,000 live births; and there is a positive trend in the percentage of internet users.

However, it seems very difficult for the region to grant universal and equitable access to potable water at an affordable price for all. Meanwhile, the trend in access to secondary education is inadequate for all boys and girls to complete that level on time by 2030. Moreover, the positive trend shown in the region with regard to the prevalence of malnutrition has stalled.

Recent economic and distributive performance, meanwhile, is insufficient to eliminate extreme poverty: in the past ten years, GDP in Latin America has grown by less than two per cent annually (1.7 per cent). And the Gini index – which measures income distribution – fell by 0.9 per cent annually over a period of ten years, although in the past three years, the rate of reduction was just 0.6 per cent annually.

For all these reasons, and given that the trends of many indicators show that the goals of various SDGs will not be reached, the policies for implementing the 2030 Agenda are more necessary today than ever. Likewise, assessing the impact of these policies is crucial when it comes to determining whether they are reverting negative trends and reinforcing positive ones.

The 2030 Agenda requires a new multilateralism that will strengthen confidence in international cooperation and collective action for the provision of global and regional public goods; increase resilience in the face of financial, trade and technological shocks; universalise welfare states and protect the rights of minorities; bolster the diverse interests of the majority over those of organised groups or where capital and technology are concentrated; and shore up the capacities for deliberation, transparency and informed debate of all citizens.

The High-Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development, taking place at the United Nations Headquarters in New York on July 9-18, invites member countries to present their progress in the implementation of the 2030 Agenda and exchange experiences in the construction of more resilient societies. This Forum is the ideal stage for the countries of the region to reinforce their commitment to comply with the agenda of civilizing transformation that the world has set for 2030 and an opportunity to take greater and better strides toward combatting the stigma that has historically marked our identity: inequality.

Alicia Bárcena is the Executive Secretary of ECLAC

Share it!

LEAVE A REPLY

.....

Your email address will not be published. Required fields are marked

Comment

Name

Email

Website

Notify me of follow-up comments by email.

Notify me of new posts by email.

This site uses Akismet to reduce spam. Learn how your comment data is processed.

You may also like these articles

Have information to share with us?

Contact us today! Nothing or no one is too big or too small for us at Barbados Today to highlight.

News
You Can Trust

ABOUT US

About Us

Contact Us

Join Our Team

ADVERTISE WITH US

Advertise With Us

LOCATION

Barbados Today

Suite F3, Building 3, Manor Lodge Complex, Lodge Hill,
St. Michael. +1 (246) 417-1000
editor@barbadostoday.bb

OUR SERVICES

Download Our Mobile App

Get the latest updates in your inbox.