GENERAL INFORMATION

INTRODUCTION

The fifty-eighth meeting of the Presiding Officers of the Regional Conference on Women in Latin America and the Caribbean will be held in Santiago on 22 and 23 January 2019.

This document is intended to provide delegates with useful information to facilitate their work at the meeting.

The meeting coordinators will be available to answer any questions concerning logistical or organizational matters that you may have, before or during the event.

1. General information on Chile

Geographical location

Chile is located in the extreme south-west of South America, between the Pacific Ocean and the Andes mountains. The country, whose long, thin territory is divided into 15 administrative regions, has a total population of approximately 17 million. The capital city is Santiago.

General information on Santiago

Santiago is home to almost six million inhabitants. It has a Mediterranean climate and well-defined seasons, with rainy winters (from May to September) with minimum temperatures as low as 0° C, and dry summers (from November to March) with highs of around 30° C. Relative humidity is low and evenings are cool.

Santiago's public transport system includes buses, taxis and five subway lines. Taxi fares are metered and, in general, drivers do not expect tips.

It is suggested that visitors drink bottled mineral water, since tap water, although safe to drink, may not agree with those not accustomed to it.

As in all big cities, it is advisable to avoid wearing expensive jewelry and to be careful with handbags and briefcases.

Climate

Northern Chile has a dry, hot, desert climate, whereas the south has a cooler, damper, temperate climate. The central zone has a Mediterranean climate. Precipitation falls mainly during the winter.

In most of Chile, the four seasons are clearly marked:

- Summer: 21 December - 21 March
- Autumn: 21 March - 21 June
- Winter: 21 June - 21 September
- Spring: 21 September - 21 December
