COMMUNICATIONS

Chile's telephone area code is 56. Area code for Santiago is 2. National and international long-distance calls are handled by a number of carriers, offering different rates. Before making a long-distance call, please inquire about services and rates.

Calls may be made through Direct Dialing or via operator. For calls within the country, please dial:

Carrier + area code + telephone number (e.g. XXX-2- 3311000)

WEATHER

Latitude, altitude and proximity to the ocean determine Chile's climate variety. Rainfalls increase and temperatures drop as one moves down southwards.

While visiting Santiago in mid November, expect temperatures between 8 and 26 degrees Celsius (between 46 and 79 degrees Fahrenheit) warmer during the day and cooler at night. For further information, please visit www.meteochile.cl

ELECTRIC POWER

Electric voltage in Chile is 220 volts, 50 cycles (220v 50Mhz). Transformers are necessary to operate 110v devices and equipment. However, most portable equipment – including personal computers – usually comes with an internal transformer that automatically sets to the voltage used in Chile. Checking power specifications for each particular electric device is recommended.
